Text analysis: This stage begins with reading the original text, conducting the necessary research, analyzing the level of complexity, and ensuring full understanding of the topic in preparation for translation.

Translation: During this stage, the content is transferred into English, taking into account the context to preserve the integrity of the original text.

Proofreading and review: After the translation is completed, the linguistic editing stage follows, followed by the grammatical review and spelling check. It also deals with formatting the text and arranging vocabulary in a manner consistent with the source.
